

SteamMaster Restoration and Cleaning in Minturn announced its new partners, Raj Manickam and Matt Monica. The company, established in 1978 by majority shareholders Gary Gilman and Julie Stoxen, is in its 40th year of operation.

SteamMaster serves nine counties in Colorado, mainly in the Vail, Breckenridge, Aspen, Steamboat Springs, Winter Park, and surrounding mountain resort communities.

When Gary Gilman founded the company, he wanted to provide a single source of cleaning and restoration services in the Vail area. Gilman also looked to support his skiing habit.

Currently, SteamMaster hovers at just under 30 employees in a 12,500-square foot, three-story building that also has a nine-employee housing unit, so trained technicians can respond to emergency losses at any time and on any day.

Housing costs and the general cost of living in a ski resort area is obviously prohibitive for many, and with on-site housing for those in the company who want it, it's a win-win situation.

The services SteamMaster offers is lengthy, but Raj indicated that the largest volume of revenue comes from the company's restoration division, which includes emergency water mitigation, smoke and fire damage restoration, and mold remediation.

In a ski resort town, the obvious challenges are cost of living, coupled with finding great, trainable, and sustainable employees. SteamMaster is constantly looking to hire the right candidates after a background check and offer housing when available.

Everyone works in line with the SteamMaster company values, which uses the acronym B.R.I.E.R, representing balance, responsibility, integrity, excellence, and results.
