

Central Coast R-TAC
California Community Schools Partnership Program

Community of Practice (COE)

The Central Coast R-TAC, in partnership with Heartwise Learning, invites you to connect with other counties through a series of virtual learning opportunities. The Heartwise Learning team has deep knowledge and experience supporting community school systems at scale. Heartwise's founder and principal, Kendra Fehrer, has authored multiple books and articles on district-led community school implementation. She has also coached and guided dozens of school and district leaders throughout California (including Oakland Unified School District) and specifically within the Central Coast. Heartwise is currently a technical assistance provider to Pajaro Valley Unified School District (PVUSD), as well as Santa Cruz County Office of Education, where they work with community school leaders to support implementation and strategy. Dr. Fehrer has served as an advisor to the State Technical Assistance Center team, the Federal Full-Service Community Schools grant program, Learning Policy Institute's community schools initiative, and various other community school collaboratives across the country. She is one of the state's foremost thinkers and authors on community school evaluation. Heartwise is known for integrating the latest research and knowledge, while moving beyond theory to focus on concrete action, targeted professional learning, and strategy.
