Dear Rabbi Feinberg,
I am writing regarding your participation at the opening of AbortionClinics.org, Inc. in Bethesda, MD, in which you conferred your rabbinical blessings on the facility and its healthcare services and providers.

Keeping in mind Judaism's emphasis on the importance of life from conception to natural death, we feel it is in the best interest of Jewish leaders to make every attempt possible, in public discourse, professional affairs, and private life, to make statements that support the lives of unborn children and promote life saving alternatives such as adoption.

In Jewish law saving a life is of supreme importance, including the life of a fetus. As I am sure you know, we are obligated by Jewish law to go as far as to violate the Sabbath in order to save a Jewish fetus. How much more so when we are talking about saving the lives of many Jewish children, as well as the lives of millions of other children from other backgrounds?

Abortion isn't only about loss of life. It is also about tremendous harm to women after abortion, which is well documented and researched. I have spoken with many post abortive Jews and non Jews who report that the abortion experience left them feeling betrayed by the friends and family who recommended it, as well as grief-stricken, broken-hearted, emotionally and mentally unbalanced, physically compromised, and spiritually inconsolable.

Lastly, Rabbi Feinberg, we applaud every Jewish action that separates Jewish association from the abortion industry, which is infamous for it's barbaric abortion methods including dismemberment without the use of pain medication for the baby, cover ups of sexual crimes against women and children, unlawful profiteering from the sale of baby parts, and systematic abuse and betrayal of clients by denying informed consent, sanitary conditions, and follow up care.

We realize your work is heavily influenced by many Jewish supporters of and contributors to your ongoing work in human rights. So that you may learn facts about the abortion industry that haven't been made available to you, we invite you to visit our website for another perspective. May HaShem open your mind and heart as you examine the information provided.

Respectfully,
Cecily Routman, Founder Jewish Pro-Life Foundation
