

Our Congregations: Confronting Racism & Engaging in Anti-Racist Action

In the December 4th edition of EMerge, Anna Kendig, the PTCA's new Anti-Racism Institutional Assessment Coordinator, offered an invitation to an "Imagination Collaboration," summarized the scope and goals of the Presbytery's anti-racism work, and named three perspectives we might embody in our justice and anti-racism work in 2021. If you missed it, you can read that here.

The coordinated efforts of the wider PTCA is just one portion of the commitment of PTCA members and congregations to the work of anti-racism. Here are two congregational examples of anti-racist efforts seeking to reach a wider community. We invite you to tell us what you or your congregation is doing to "spread this conversation wide." Write to Anna at ptca.anti-racism@gmail.com.

THE ARCC OF CHANGE with Donzel Leggett

EPISODE Four: My Anti-Racism Transformation Journey and a Discussion with Pastor Dean J. Seal

LINK TO THE PODCAST

In this episode, Donzel Leggett, member of Shepherd of the Hill Presbyterian Church in Chaska, explains his "Anti-Racism Transformation Journey" and welcomes the Rev. Dean J. Seal, pastor of Shepherd of the Hills, to the show to discuss anti-racism and its critical role in the future of the United States and the world; the importance of interfaith collaboration in spreading anti-racism; and finally, the influence of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. The episode also previews ARCC's first ever Book Club event series, Dr. King's "A Letter from a Birmingham Jail," hosted by Pastor Dean J. Seal. From PTCA pastor Karen Larson and her UCC congregation in Pine Island:

Twin Cities Public Television featured a two-part series on racial tensions in Pine Island, Minnesota—and the anti-racism work that the Rev. Karen Larson is doing, both within her congregation and in the public sphere. Rev. Larson is a member of the Presbytery of the Twin Cities Area currently serving the Zwingli United Church of Christ in Berne, Minnesota, just west of Pine Island.
