The needlepoint kneeler project began in 1981 under the guidance of parishioners Vail Whitbeck and Molly Poole, working with designer Marta Frutiger who developed stitching patters for the kneelers based on interests of stitchers and donors. The first 15 kneelers were dedicated on June 6, 1982. It took 10 years to produce 556 custom-designed works of art stitched by 200 parishioners and friends of the parish. All upholstered in the same blue fabric, each kneeler top presents a religious theme.

Vail Whitbeck kept records of the stichers, donors, dedications, and pattern descriptions, as well as photos and negatives of most of the kneelers. After her death in 2001, these records were preserved and added to by parish secretary and archivist Gwen Cheney. During a 10-year hiatus of the archives committee, the records became a part of a growing collection of unsorted materials.

The archives committee was revived in 2015, and in recent years has worked to make the records of this enormous project more available. Members Ruth Hazzard and Diane Healey searched for and organized the existing kneeler records. Judy Wadsworth then used these records to create this chart presenting the stitcher, donor, dedication, pattern data, and photo for each kneeler, where available. The early records included some small albums of kneeler photos encased in plasticine. While providing labels to help match kneeler to written description, these photographs were suboptimal in quality. A box of negatives, evidently from the years they were created, had been found. Cheryl and John Bero matched the negatives to the existing photographs, then John used modern technology to create clear electronic images from the negatives. These images were then incorporated into this chart. The kneelers chart is now accessible to all interested persons via the parish website: http://stpaulsec.org/. In the fall of 2026, a box of photographic slides depicting the kneelers was found in a closet in the Wainwright building. These will be processed to see if any new information can be gleaned from them, and if so, this document will be updated. Viewers with questions or comments are encouraged to contact the archives committee at archives@stpaulsec.org.
