

Utah isn't getting the Medicaid expansion we voted for.

Utah's partial Medicaid expansion plan could shut Utahns out of coverage when they need it most. It's not right that arbitrary enrollment caps can make people like this ineligible.

Graduate Student

A lab assistant in Salt Lake County is working her way through graduate school. Since her employer doesn't offer health insurance, she needs Medicaid help keep her healthy, working and ready to succeed in school.

Business Owner

A carpenter in San Pete County had to close his family business. Now he works part-time to pay the bills but doesn't make nearly enough to buy health insurance on his own.

Mother of Three

A child care aide from Utah County has three kids at home and no benefits through work, so none of them have health coverage. Research shows that when parents aren't covered, children don't get covered.

Cancer Patient

A working mother of two from Weber County was just diagnosed with cancer, but her employer doesn't offer health coverage. Without Medicaid, paying for treatment could lead to bankruptcy and keep her from taking care of her family.
