A Message from PCC

October 16, 2019

Dear friends of Penn Central Conference,

"So Jacob was left alone, and a man wrestled with him till daybreak. When the man saw that he could not overpower him, he touched the socket of Jacob's hip so that his hip was wrenched as he wrestled with the man. Then the man said, 'Let me go, for it is daybreak.' But Jacob replied, 'I will not let you go unless you bless me.' (Genesis 32:22-26)

I read this passage at the beginning of the Board of Directors meeting on October 5th to those gathered. I knew it was a lectionary selection for October 20th and I had been thinking about it for several days. I knew that it kept cropping up in my mind because of the decisions we were facing at that meeting. I knew we would wrestle with them. And I knew we would need to hear a blessing by the end of the day.

Some passages of scripture lend themselves well to metaphorical interpretation. Sometimes that isn't the best use of scripture and the interpretations take us far afield. But this passage from Genesis lends itself well to reflecting on our lives as believers. In the Genesis version Jacob is said to be wrestling with "a man." In Hosea 12:4 the prophet claims that Jacob wrestled with "the angel," which explains why we often refer to Jacob wrestling with an angel on the banks of the river. This is the image we see depicted in artwork through the ages and the one that lends itself so well to our own reflections.

Which one of us hasn't wrestled within our faith? I mean wrestling to the point of pain, and tears, and almost being overcome. I have known it in my own life - in private moments and in public ones. At the time I would never have said it was an angel. I might have claimed the opposite. And I recognize now that this wrestling leaves us with a limp - as it did Jacob - we are changed and we carry our wounds within us. We may also carry a blessing, but only if we have asked for it.

Jacob's refusal to release the angel until it has blessed him is remarkable to me. Far from begging the angel to leave (as I've done many times, I admit), Jacob refused to release him - even in the midst of physical pain - and instead humbles himself in asking for a blessing. In response the angel asks for his name, and then changes it. What would it take for us to do the same? Could we ask God for a new name, a new sense of identity that reflects what we have been through? That would be a blessing not only to us, but also to those who come after us?

Whatever the wrestling includes - spiritual questions, vocational calling, momentous decisions, or existential anxiety and fear - demand of it a blessing. In the blessing we will find the hope for moving forward. Peace,

Carrie
