A Brief History of the Pastoral Colloquy

The PCC-UEK partnership and Pastoral Colloquy began in the 1980's in order to affirm the unity of the church across brutal borders and to provide mutual support between the Penn Central Conference and the Evangelical Church in Berlin-Brandenburg (now EKBO). These colloquies have continued biennially since then, alternating between Berlin-Brandenburg and central Pennsylvania. They have dealt with a variety of issues of mutual interest and concern. Over the years, many long-standing friendships among pastors on both sides of the Atlantic have blossomed and flourished.

At the 2018 colloquy, the decision was made to widen the welcome and include other partners in the fellowship of the colloquy. For the 2020 colloquy we have decided to extend the table a bit further and invite additional partners to the conversation. It is our hope that this will help to broaden and deepen all of our partnerships and lead to the formation of additional lasting friendships.

Also at the 2018 gathering it was decided that we would like to continue our dialogue on the topic of peace-making. The need for the church to continue working on peace-making is as urgent today as it was when the colloquies began—yes, and even before that. Since central Pennsylvania is home to one of the largest populations of what are called the “historic peace churches,” it seemed logical to make use of that valuable resource for learning more about how the church at every level can be an effective agent for peace in the world, in our communities, and in the church itself.

We are extremely pleased that the world-famous Young Center for Anabaptist and Pietist Studies has agreed not only to cooperate with us in developing our colloquy but also to host us for this event. We hope that you will join us for study, worship, and fellowship in July.

*“Blessed are the peacemakers,
for they will be called children of God.”
(Matthew 5:9)*

*„Selig sind, die Frieden stiften;
denn sie werden Gottes Kinder heißen.“
(Matthäus 5,9)*
