

PENN CENTRAL CONFERENCE

Empowering churches to proclaim the reconciling love of Christ.

A Message from PCC

February 26, 2020

Dear Friends of Penn Central Conference -

"For the fate of humans and the fate of animals is the same; as one dies, so dies the other. They all have the same breath...all are from the dust and all turn to dust again." (Ecclesiastes 3)

While a young pastor in New Jersey, I was blessed to have a young couple in the congregation from Liberia. The wife was pregnant when I arrived and they were overjoyed to learn they were expecting twins. The day of the birth came, yet only one twin survived. In the days to come the couple struggled with the joy of their baby boy's life and grief at the death of their baby girl. This was a classic pastoral situation – one fraught with sorrow and questions and anguish in the face of a seemingly capricious universe. Their faith sustained them, but it did not soothe their heartbreak.

The church had recently created a small memorial garden in our historic graveyard. We were not expecting the first set of ashes to be those of a tiny girl. When I stood with the parents in the garden, they took out the small bag holding the cremains (how was it possible this was all that remained?) and I shook the contents into the space we had made in the ground for her. As I did this, the ashes stirred in the wind and my hands received a light dusting. A moment later I reached out for the mother and fathers' hands and we stood in prayer. In that one, singular moment, I felt the grit of the baby's ashes in the palm of my hand against the warmth of the mother's hand in my own, and I knew mortality as a complete, wrenching fact. These ashes – to this we are reduced.

Historically Lent was a time to confront our mortality and ponder our life on earth as preparation for returning to God and ash. Our task remains the same today. Death has a way of reminding us of both the fragility and promise of life. During Lent we consider anew the inevitable fact of our own death alongside how to live into the promise of God during our days on earth.

Every Ash Wednesday I think of that young couple and that moment of standing in the garden. I also remember the faith that encircled us, and the warmth of the living hands that held my own. Ash Wednesday is about remembering – from whence we come and where we will go – both into the cold earth and into the warm hands of God. Today I sit with my hands in my lap and remember the ash-covered hands that held mine in the garden. I remember Mary Oliver's words, "Doesn't everything die at last, and too soon?" And I remember, day after day, to grab hold of Jesus' hand, the one that will lead me through 40 days of reflection, truth-telling, and healing, all the way to another garden, where we will see the glory of our true end.

Peace,
Carrie
