

Painting Florals in Watercolors

This class will teach the methods for painting three beautiful flowers, using the inherent qualities of the watercolor medium. Watercolor is fluid by nature and capturing the image of a sunflower, a rose or the hibiscus in a loose and exciting manner, is a way that watercolors can be applied which is one objective of the program. Students can select one or all three flowers to study and paint, using actual flowers (not a photo) as the subject. The class will study the basic elements of each flower and towards the end of the six week program, students can attempt to paint a bouquet using the image of one or all three flowers within the composition.

The program is six weeks in duration, each weekly class being two hours long. The primary goal is to complete a painting based on each student's own composition and selection of flowers; concentrating on form and color.

This is an intermediate level class and will require a specific list of materials and supplies (a list will be available with a more detailed description of the program). A limited palette will be used.
