Sara M. Johnson, FACHE

SPEAKER

Leadership Advisor, Executive Coach,
Keynote Speaker

BIOGRAPHY

Sara Johnson is dedicated to helping leaders and organizations unlock their full potential through strategic vision, culture transformation and leadership development. As a leadership advisor and executive coach, she collaborates with executives and teams to strengthen leadership effectiveness, drive organizational change and foster environments where individuals thrive.

With a background as a clinical professional and administrative leader in the healthcare industry as well as most recently, director of Indiana University Executive Education, Johnson has guided organizations in building leadership capacity, enhancing team effectiveness and improving organizational outcomes. She shares her expertise to enhance executive leadership, organizational behavior, healthcare, nonprofit leadership and in state and federal government, equipping leaders with the skills needed to navigate complex challenges.

Johnson remains committed to developing future leaders as an adjunct faculty member at Indiana University, where she teaches graduate and executive education courses on executive leadership and organizational effectiveness. She is a Fellow of ACHE and has served as the Indiana Regent for ACHE and on the ACHE Board of Governors. Johnson is a sought-after speaker on the topic of effective leadership and creating a leadership legacy throughout one's career.

Her work extends beyond the classroom and boardroom through certifications in DiSC Workstyle, DiSC Management and DiSC Agile EQ, helping individuals and teams build stronger relationships and improve performance. She has been recognized with multiple teaching and professional achievement awards, a testament to her commitment to empowering others.

Johnson holds a Bachelor of Science in health services management and a Master of Health Administration from Indiana University, with additional doctoral studies at Trinity Seminary.
