

Dr. Flannery is an Emergency Medicine physician currently serving as Associate Chief Medical Officer of Henry Ford Hospital. Previously, she served as Medical Director of Utilization Management at HFH. In these roles, she has led numerous throughput and operational initiatives developing protocols and processes to enhance hospital operations, reduce length of stay, and ensure compliance with Medicare regulations. She is heavily involved in capacity management and patient throughput as well as numerous quality improvement initiatives. Dr. Flannery completed her residency in Emergency Medicine at Henry Ford Hospital, where she also served as Chief Resident from 2015 to 2016. She earned her Doctor of Medicine degree from Michigan State University, College of Human Medicine, and holds a Bachelor of Science in Preprofessional Studies from the University of Notre Dame.