Dear Scottsdale Prep Families,

This week affords our entire community some valuable time to relax and rejuvenate. In the midst of the break, our teachers are preparing narrative evaluations for your careful review on Sunday, October 13th. These narratives provide students and parents with valuable information about how students are learning, and they direct students to particular areas for growth.

We encourage families to review these evaluations thoughtfully with students, and all 7th – 12th grade students will be asked to identify key themes from the narratives in preparation for their conference. They will present these statements to their teachers and parents during the conference and work together to solidify several goals for the next quarter and beyond. 6th Grade families are welcome to include 6th grade students in attending and observing their conference. We have found that their observations from that conference experience are helpful when they approach and lead their 7th grade conference the following year.

As we move forward into the year, we believe that this focus on growth through their own individual goals will be vital to their overall success, and we look forward to partnering with you in helping them reach these goals. Please look for an email from Jupiter Online this Sunday, which will prompt you to visit their “Report Card” for Quarter 1, and as always, please reach out to us with any questions.

Onward Spartans!
