LIVING WATER: SOURCE OF HEALTH, CONNECTION AND HOPE

WATER OF LIFE

Fall 2025

A Ripple of Hope IN EL SALVADOR

By Doug Depies
LWW Networks Coordinator

IN 2005, A SMALL BUT MIGHTY TEAM FROM TRINITY PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN STARKVILLE, MISS., TRAVELED TO A RURAL ELEMENTARY AND MIDDLE SCHOOL NEAR THE TOWN OF CALUCO, EL SALVADOR. THEY WEREN'T CARRYING CONSTRUCTION MATERIALS OR SCHOOL SUPPLIES; THEY WERE BRINGING THE GIFT OF CLEAN WATER.

Through their partnership with Living Waters for the World (LWW), they installed a water purification system that would change the lives of countless children and families for years to come.

The results from using the purified water were almost immediate. Parents reported a significant drop in stomach pains among their children, and kids weren't absent from school as frequently. This wasn't just a physical change; it was a psychological one, too - a tangible sign of care and a promise of a healthier future.

Thirteen years after its installation, in 2018, an LWW audit team visited the Plan de Amayo school to see how the system was faring. What they discovered was a testament to the community's incredible resilience and commitment. The system was still operational and in good repair, run by a dedicated team of volunteers, including six newly trained youth operators. They sold the purified water for just 25 cents a bottle to ensure it was affordable for their community, a small fraction of the $2.50 charged by commercial vendors. They also generously donated a portion of the water to those in need.

This system was more than just a source of water; it was a hub for community engagement. The school's principal and vice principal took the lead on health education, teaching students, parents, and community members about the importance of handwashing and how to use purified water. It was a beautiful example of a community taking ownership of its health and well-being.

While the system thrived for many years, the inevitable challenges of changing school administrations and graduating students eventually took their toll. The system saw less use, and for a period, it fell into disuse.

But the story doesn't end there! The powerful relationships built over the years proved their worth once again. The school's new principal, recognizing the immense value of the system, reached out to Denis Evangelista, LWW's in-country coordinator. Denis is a true "pillar of this project," and his dedication, along with the renewed interest of the school administration, has sparked a new beginning.

Thanks to a powerful collaboration between the LWW project, the local Salvadoran organization, Salvadorans Helping Salvadorans, and generous financial support from First Presbyterian, Spirit Lake, Iowa, and the Presbyterian Disaster Assistance, the system is getting a new lease on life. The community just had their water celebration in November and the system is once again providing clean, safe drinking water to the school and surrounding community.

The story of the Plan de Amayo water system is a powerful reminder that our work is never truly finished. It's about building relationships, empowering communities, and creating a sustainable legacy of health and hope.

Celebrating clean water flowing again at Plan de Amayo, Caluco, El Salvador.

Living Waters for the World in Cuba

By Kendall Cox
LWW Director of Programs

In late October, I traveled to Cuba as part of the water team from my church, First Presbyterian Church of Greenville, Miss. We were accompanied by Jerry and Verniece Goode who back in 2008 worked with the leadership of the Presbyterian church of Cuba to pave the way for Living Waters for the World (LWW) partnering on water there. This visit focused on working side by side with the Presbyterian church in Camajuani to train new operators and educators and install a new water system. We were also able to visit nine other water partners across the island, each with stories of perseverance, faith, and deep gratitude.

special mix of courage and craziness to visit now - with all the blackouts and mosquito-borne illnesses making daily life more difficult. Dengue, Chikungunya, Zika, Oropouche - our partners have faced them all, yet they continue to serve their communities with joy and resilience.

When the power goes out, water system operators wait for the electricity to return - sometimes in the middle of the night - so they can make their way to the church and start processing the purified water for the day. It's hard, exhausting work, and yet they keep going.

The words we heard again and again were powerful: Blessing. Beloved. Hope. Health. Renewal. Family. Community. Life.

Many hands make light work: Getting the pump ready to add to the water system.

A common thread we heard from everyone was simple and profound: "Thank you for coming to be beside us."

Several even joked (as Cubans often do, with humor shining through hardship) that it took a Yosmel Fernandez, LWW's in-country technician for Cuba, shows Kevin how to wrap PVC with teflon tape. Kevin's dad and grandfather are system operators.

Over and over, our partners expressed gratefulness for the cooperation, solidarity, and mutuality that define a water partnership. Our team members also shared how much our water partners mean to our churches, recalling visits over the years, watching little ones grow up (some now serving as operators!), celebrating anniversaries as water partners. Larkin Mitchell, a member of our team, reminded us all, “There are a lot of parts to a water system, and the most important part is the people. God works through the people.”

One visit we made was to the Martin Luther King Jr. Center in Havana, where the third LWW water partnership in Cuba was established in June 2011 (there are now 72 water partners!) Their U.S. partner is First-Trinity Presbyterian Church of Laurel, Miss. Jerry and Verniece’s church. There we met Armado, one of the original operators; Daniel, a newer operator; Daniel, a new administrator; and Pete, who has worked at the center for 26 years. They shared what the water partnership means to them: “Our water partnership for us is a sign of hope. People from the U.S. and people from Cuba, involved together – it’s a miracle of togetherness.”

Throughout our time together, we saw that miracle in action over and over again as people came to get purified water. Armado shared that a mother came to get water for her sick child who was a patient at a nearby pediatric hospital. “¿Cuánto cuesta?” she asked - “How much does it cost?” When they told her there was no charge (partners are not allowed to sell the water in Cuba), she was stunned. “It’s impossible that this is free!” she said.

Moments like that remind us what this ministry is truly about: living water, shared in love.

A few years ago, someone asked me, “Why don’t you just write a check and send it to Cuba? You could send more money if you didn’t go.” It was a sincere question, and instead of offering a quick answer, I decided to ask our partners in Cuba what they thought.

I took the question straight to Rev. Ofelia Ortega, a professor at the Evangelical Theological Seminary in Matanzas - where the very first LWW water partnership in Cuba was established in 2009. Ofelia was also the first woman ordained as a pastor in the Presbyterian Church in Cuba.

She thought for a moment and then said:

“Hmm. Well, if you only sent money, then we wouldn’t see your faces. And when we see your faces, we see Jesus. When you come to see us, it gives us hope. We know we are remembered.” Ofelia then took my face in her hands. “So please don’t ever just send money. We want to see your faces.”

And to that, I can only say: Amen. It is a blessing to be together. A miracle of togetherness.

Clean hands save lives: hand washing is a simple and powerful way to prevent illness and protect our communities, an essential part of our health education curriculum.

LIVING WATER: Source of Health, Connection, and Hope

By Janet Salyer

Carson and Janet having dinner with partners in the Sacred Valley region of Peru.

“WATER IS LIFE,” AS THE SAYING GOES - UNTIL THAT LIFE SOURCE BECOMES LIFE-THREATENING.

Our family enjoyed good health in our early days living in rural Georgia. Each of us had an occasional bout of illness; but it never occurred to us that the illness we contracted might be waterborne. One week in early spring, as my husband Carson and I parented a busy toddler, chased an active preschooler, and prepared to sell our home for Carson to begin seminary studies the next year, he became gravely ill. In a short period of time, he developed frightening symptoms, including internal hemorrhaging, requiring his admission to the hospital for testing and treatment. Thankfully, with excellent care and careful diagnosing, Carson survived that terrible illness. The conclusion reached by his doctors was that the cause of his illness was contaminated water from our shallow well.

Life flowed on. Eight years after we had left seminary to begin a new season of life, a seminary student sat alone in one of the classrooms where my husband had studied a decade before. Wil Howie, LWW founder, was reflecting on a tragedy of which he had become increasingly aware: the worldwide scarcity of pure drinking water. He had learned that waterborne illness is a leading cause of death in developing countries, particularly among children. Wil prayed and experienced a strong sense of call. He was tuned into a life-threatening, worldwide problem, but a problem which could be tackled, and, hopefully, solved. Wil wanted to help do the tackling. He immediately took action, planting seeds for what ultimately became the ministry of Living Waters for the World (LWW).

when members of our congregation, Westminster Presbyterian, Nashville, Tenn. learned about LWW and began installing water purification systems in Peru. When Carson heard that this ministry was initiated by a fellow seminary alum and addressed a critical problem that he himself had experienced, he wanted to learn more. Knowing that Wil had heard a call and made a choice to answer the call inspired Carson and energized him to join the effort. We've come to say that “where there's a Wil there's a way!” My husband is now happily volunteering alongside friends in this life-giving ministry - a ministry that has expanded to residents of twenty-eight countries. In our state of Tennessee and in neighboring counties of Kentucky, church members have installed water purification systems in the homes of 61 rural families for whom water from public water supplies is not available - families who have faced situations similar to what we experienced in rural Georgia.

That ministry has quenched the thirst for long-lasting international friendships, for deep, abiding connections, and for greatly improved health in those receiving the gift of pure water.

My husband's waterborne illness occurred in 1977; and we met Wil in 2009

Wonderfully, and mysteriously, the Creator Spirit, Divine Source of Life that hovered over the Deep, calls to us, beckoning us to come together in concern for the health and well-being of all God's children. The converging waters of the earth are one; and so it is with us. What affects one of us affects us all.

HOPE'S FIRE

Somewhere along the way of life
We find that water flows
And when we share it far and wide
The love of God's what shows

There is a fire within our souls
That warms us to our depths
It is a hope that opens grace
And by it we are kept

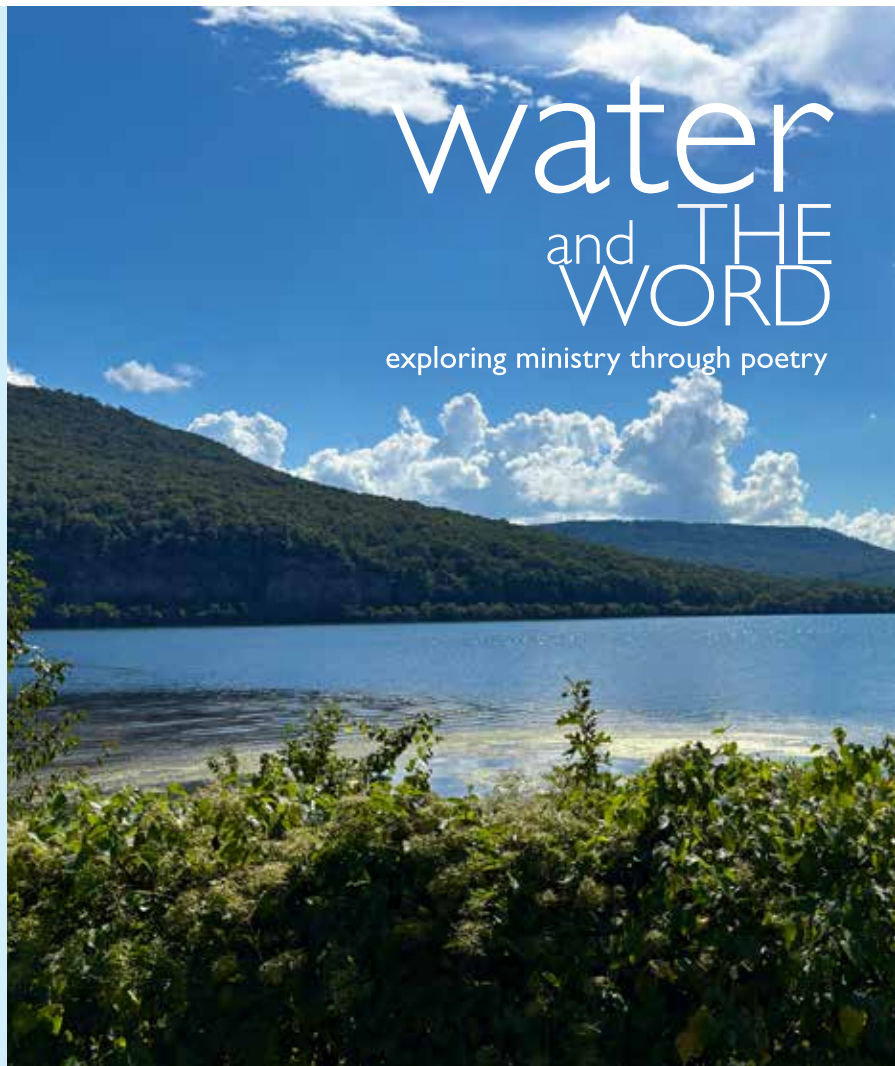

Now sisters, tell your children
And brothers, tell them, too
The self of God has been poured out
To make us holy glue

We dare go out into the world
To live the hope and love
That God has planted in our souls
By way of heaven's dove

Now people, please remember
That we have been set free
Because the priceless gift of God
Is poured abundantly
