

CALL FOR STAFF FELLOWS

Rutgers Global – Global Learning Fellows Program

Sponsored by Rutgers Global - Center for Global Education / Study Abroad
For Spring/Summer/Winter 2023

Rutgers Global is seeking nominations for current staff members who would like to serve as a Fellow in the Rutgers Global –Global Learning Fellows Program in the initiative's second year of operation – for Spring/Summer/Winter 2023.

The Global Learning Fellows Program (GLFP) is a professional development opportunity for mid-career professionals at Rutgers, allowing staff members the opportunity to gain field-based experience designing and running a global learning program, under the guidance of an experienced Rutgers University faculty member. The program is also designed to encourage staff members with expertise in various aspects of student services to contribute by applying their learning and expertise to the design of new or expanded global learning programs.

The GLFP program is part of a larger Rutgers University commitment to Global Learning for All - ensuring that all Rutgers University students have access to significant opportunities for global learning. To that end, Rutgers University is actively partnering with faculty and staff to develop equity and access-focused global learning opportunities which demonstrate a commitment to solving global problems and to confronting global issues of injustice.

The Global Learning Fellows will hone their leadership skills through engagement in program design, curriculum development, student mentoring, and community-engaged learning experiences. The Fellows will then participate in the implementation of a study abroad program, applying their knowledge and skills as a co-facilitator.

Each Global Learning Fellow will be assigned to a faculty member running a specific study abroad program in 2023. Responsibilities include regular meetings with the faculty mentor and participation in a 7-14-day program.

Rutgers Global covers the Fellow's program expenses, including airfare, meals, housing, international health insurance, and local transportation.

Once a fellowship is offered, the staff member's supervisor must agree to allow participation in pre-departure meetings as well as approve the five-to-ten business days where the Fellow will be deployed to the study abroad program.

Interested applicants or those making nominations should email Dan Waite, Executive Director of the Center for Global Education / Study Abroad @ dwaite@global.rutgers.edu.
