Texas Ramp Project brings family more freedom through biggest build

VICTORIA, Texas - The Texas Ramp project completed its most ambitious build for a woman who was confined to her home for three months without the ability to freely leave.

Rosa Cuellar's complications with diabetes led to an amputation that forced her into a wheelchair. There are no other entrances to the home besides the front door

Her family and friends supported her by helping her get out of the house to attend appointments, go to the store, or do anything outside of the house.

Due to her loved ones' schedules, it wasn't a sustainable situation to allow her full freedom and autonomy.

The Victoria North Chapter of the Texas Ramp Project changed everything for Cuellar and her family, building a 70-foot ramp, their largest project.

Cuellar says the ramp was completed in just three hours, forever changing the accessibility to their home.

Justin Sandoval, Cuellar's son, says the ramp has given his mother complete access to the house with minimal support. He says they now can go to restaurants, appointments, and any other locations they desire without needing multiple people to assist.

The Texas Ramp Project received support from several veterans and volunteers. The crew is always accepting new volunteers; those interested can contact Mark Kortokrax at 361-799-9098.
