

EVEREST BRINGS THE FUN

By Nancy K. & Trish K.

If dogs could talk, some of them would have quite a tale to tell. Everest F. is one of those dogs. He came to GSRNC with a limp on his front leg. A trip to the vet revealed that he had a bullet in his paw! There's no way for us to know what happened, but his obsessive interest in horses makes us wonder if he was caught chasing livestock. His story will always be a mystery.

The bullet was successfully removed, and Everest mended well. But a little thing like a foot injury isn't enough to slow him down! This big, bouncy boy is always ready for an adventure. When he knows an outing is imminent, he taps his front feet in eagerness while waiting for his collar to be put on.

Everest is a gorgeous boy who is about two years old and appears to be a German Shepherd-Husky mix. He's a happy-go-lucky guy with perky ears and a persistent smile on his face. The Husky in Everest makes him a great runner! He would be the perfect companion for someone looking for a hiking or running buddy. He walks well on leash and stays in stride with his person while running.

This big boy is secure and confident and has a lot of positive energy. He's had a little training and knows his basic commands. Everest loves treats but will do ANYTHING for pets and belly rubs...he loves to be showered with affection! He can get happily worked up, becoming all jumpy and goofy but is learning how to settle down and control himself. Because of his energy level, Everest should live with an active family who will take him along for the fun!

Everest cannot live with livestock. His exposure to horses has proved that he shows way too much interest to live in harmony with them. However, he could probably live with another dog as long as it's the right fit. He has a rough and tumble play style that isn't for everyone.

Everest needs a forever home (but would settle for a foster home for now). Maybe you can help this boy. Does he sound like a match for your family? If so, please fill out our Adoption Questionnaire and we will be in touch!
