2025 MLK Day of Service Participants Brave the Winter Weather

Despite a threatened cancellation due to a winter storm, the 2025 MLK Day of Service went ahead as planned. The weather did scare away some participants and caused a site or two to cancel for the event, but roughly 90 people gathered together in the MCLA Venable Gym to celebrate the life and work of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. by using the morning to volunteer in the community.

The weather meant a slower start to the day as volunteers trickled in after shoveling out their cars and driveways. Andre Lynch, Vice Provost for Institutional Equity and Belonging for MCLA, woke the crowd up with a passionate welcome and opening remarks, before nbCC Community Connections Coordinator, Gabby Glasier, dismissed everyone to head out to service sites.

About two dozen volunteers stayed on site to work on projects available at the gym. Projects included making Valentines Day cards, friendship bracelets, and winter necessities like mittens and blankets.

Everyone else headed out into the community to various sites throughout north Berkshire County. Groups volunteered at No Paws Left Behind, Louison House, ROOTS Teen Center, Berkshire Food Project, Sweetwood, and weatherizing several resident's homes.

Everyone was excited to see a strong showing from our youth community at this year's day of service. A group of students from BART Charter School washed and cleaned the kennels at No Paws Left Behind, while another group visited the ROOTS Teen Center and helped organize and clean the youth drop-in space. A group of students from Williams headed out to Sweetwood to lend a hand. High school and college students also joined the volunteers helping at the Berkshire Food Project prepping salads and chilis to serve all the hungry volunteers at the celebratory luncheon.

Service site projects wrapped up around noon and everyone headed back to the Venable Gym to enjoy the lunch provided by Berkshire Food Project, Bigg Daddy's and Christo's Famous Pizza.

MCLA President, Dr. Jamie Birge welcomed everyone back as people settled into lunch. Both he and Andre reflected on the importance of these moments of service and community, quoting reflections of both Dr. King and JFK.

Finally, members of the planning committee took the stage to present the highlight of the luncheon, the annual Peacemaker Award. This year the award was presented to Dr. Gina Coleman, long time resident of the area and the director of diversity, equity, inclusion, and belonging at the Brien Center. You can read more about Gina and why she was chosen as this year's Peacemaker on page 3.

Despite the very wintery weather the day was filled with joy and laughter, and we all got some good work done, too! Please consider joining us for this event next year on Monday, January 19, 2026.

Gina Coleman Honored with 2025 Peacemaker Award

The Peacemaker Award is given annually to an individual or group in Northern Berkshire. The award, which originated as part of the annual Martin Luther King, Jr. Day of Service, is made to persons who have contributed substantially to peace in our region. In general, the Peacemaker Award recognizes persons who have a history of working with people and/or neighborhoods and communities to provide for greater tolerance, understanding, and caring.

This year the MLK Jr. Day of Service Committee is proud to announce that Dr. Gina Coleman has been selected from the numerous worthy people and groups nominated by the community, and will be honored with the 2025 Peacemaker Award at this month's annual Northern Berkshire MLK Jr. Day of Service, on Monday, January 20th during the celebratory luncheon.

Dr. Gina Coleman is a community member whose passion for social justice and racial equity is evident in her professional and personal efforts. Currently, Gina serves as the Director of Diversity, Equity, Inclusion and Belonging for the Brien Center. Through her role, she has been able to provide training to local organizations on how to confront bias and bigotry. Beyond her professional career, Gina has been an advocate on boards for several institutions: MCLA, BART, and Berkshire Music School. She leads the organization of an annual Juneteenth Celebration Concert, now in its third year, and was also an early member of the Williamstown Diversity, Inclusion, and Racial Equity Committee.

Gina has put her musical talents to work in creating a more compassionate and inclusive community as well. In 2021, Gina took part in the Black Legacy Project, a collaborative effort among local musicians to record songs with historical and cultural significance to the black community. This project was a part of the ongoing work of Music in Common, a nonprofit dedicated to bringing people of all backgrounds together and helping them find common ground through the collaboration and creation of music.

As a mother, educator, musician, and community member, Gina Coleman leads with compassion and has strived to build a more understanding, equitable, and inclusive community.

The History of nbCC's Youth Programming

The monthly forums of nbCC began in the usual manner in 1993 with a community needs assessment asking the questions, "What's doing in the community?" Representatives from two school districts in attendance brought up concerns about a growing level of violence and confrontation. Concern over community youth was well articulated by many educators. The discussion evolved into the question of what was different then, that might be contributing to the new experiences? While many at the forum shared concerns and problem-solving ideas, the foremost question became, "Why not ask the young people themselves? Why not offer young people the platform to recruit adults to help make their world a bit safer?"

During 1993-1994, Northern Berkshire youth were invited to most monthly forums to discuss their experiences. School superintendents, principals, teachers, agency staff and young people met each month. The adults learned a lot about the youth experience, but more importantly, both the youth and the adults learned how essential it was to meet and talk together. All involved believed that the forum for youth should continue. With support from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation, the youth development arm of nbCC, called UNITY, was born.

UNITY stood for United Neighboring Interdependent Trusted Youth - coined by founding UNITY teen member Jamie Haddad. With the funds raised and the concept created, the first Program Director, Claudia Williamson, was hired. The defining purpose of the UNITY youth development project was to strengthen the Northern Berkshire voice from youth to create opportunities for youth and adults to work together for a stronger community. Two important facets of UNITY from the beginning were its roots in serving youth in the entire Northern Berkshire region and the focus on positive youth development.

In its beginning, UNITY was a venue for youth to gather locally and build toward a regional entity. Many groups in communities work with youth, but few provide opportunities for them to identify regionally. School and community sports offer competitive venues for youth; faith institutions are generally town-based, and yet issues that Northern Berkshire youth face are not confined by town lines. UNITY, from the beginning, worked to focus on positive change for the youth community. It strived to build upon community strengths and to have youth and adults working as partners. Communities do a lot for youth, but involving and empowering them to be active members of the community offered a refreshing challenge. UNITY made the adult/youth partnership a key component of its work.

During its infancy, UNITY promoted regional youth forums held in various schools. The agenda for these forums included discussions of the issues that youth face, as well as opportunities for them to get to know students from other schools. A youth-led and driven steering committee set the agendas for the wider regional/North County UNITY meetings. Being a UNITY participant held its own status as a school activity. UNITY allies (faculty or staff from local schools) supported UNITY members and provided the assistance needed for its participants to attend meetings. A year-end celebration helped UNITY reflect on the work accomplished during the year.

UNITY grew and took on added attributes with new members and coordinators. The UNITY Players were formed. It was a theater troupe that wrote and performed its own plays about growing up in the Northern Berkshire region. Topical subject matter for these plays came from real experiences, and while compelling with raw and emotional scripts, the performances helped push others to see and understand the youth experience differently.

UNITY ventured into the arts with assistance from a Massachusetts Cultural Council grant provided to promote arts-based activities to empower youth and encourage positive youth development. UNITY members designed a billboard and a sculpture garden at Natural Bridge State Park, published seven volumes of Somewhere Between, journals of teenage writing, and helped with the creation of The Grooove, a teen-led coffeehouse. The UNITY program became a mix of youth forums and arts activities.

In the early 2000s UNITY staff members implemented the Youth Leadership Program, guided by a science-based youth development curriculum with proven outcomes in preventing dropouts and teen pregnancies and reducing school failure. Participants in the UNITY Youth Leadership Program had a responsibility to perform community service. In its first full year, the young leaders provided more than 150 hours of community service!

The Grooove was born when Drury High School students Allison Buck and Breanna Robinson had a vision that became a reality on March 8, 1997. On that night, with funding from the Berkshire Prevention Alliance, a full house of teenagers gathered at the Appalachian Bean Cafe, where Ramunto's now stands, for a highly successful "open mic" night. Voila - the Grooove!

Grooove was an instant success. Teens met at the Coalition year-round to plan and mount safe, substance-free events for Northern Berkshire young people.

The sustainability of those efforts was credited to the financial support of the Youth Reach Program of the Massachusetts Cultural Council. Besides the high attendance and longevity, another Grooove strength was a history of diverse projects. Beyond the open mic nights, Grooove features "Chick Nite," rock shows at MASS MoCA, a Grooove CD and "Grooovestock" concerts that have featured workshops and speakers on issues such as peace. For a decade, Grooove explored new ways to meet the need that young people expressed for safe, fun places to hang out. Like many great things Grooove eventually came to an end due a mix of circumstances. We hope in the future we can revisit this concept and bring a similar experience to the new generation of youth of the community.

Today, while the name UNITY has been dropped, the programs and commitment to supporting Northern Berkshire youth remains a focus of the work of the Coalition. There are currently four youth programs at nbCC. The Youth Leadership Program is still going strong. The youth led forum continues to this day, but is now the annual culmination of youth participating in the Youth Health Collaborative. Each spring this group presents one of the monthly community forums based on a topic of their choosing. Somewhere Between is now coming up on its 27th volume in 2025. This creative writing journal has become a staple of the Teen Writing Workshop program, a creative writing group that has expanded to include youth interested in visual arts.

The final program, the Youth Empowerment Program (YEP) is exclusively for youth in grades 6-8. This weekly group meets on Monday afternoons to talk about school, emotions, navigating teen years, making friends and more.
