The Opportunities and Challenges Facing Our Local Economy

November's forum tackled the topic of our local economies and workforce. Dr. Ben Lamb, Vice President of Economic Development at 1Berkshire, and Bryana Malloy, Manager of Industry Relations & Berkshire Market Maker at MassHire, served as the forum moderators. In their introduction to the topic they offered a broad overview of the Berkshires economic factors. Our economy is comprised of six main clusters: advanced manufacturing & Digital enterprise, creative economy & culture, food & agriculture, hospitality & tourism, health & wellness, and outdoor recreation. Annually, Berkshire County generates eight billion dollars in gross domestic product.

The biggest challenges facing our economy are a workforce, housing, transportation and broadband access. These issues are considered "cross cutting", meaning they are true across all fields of work and regions, and each is complicated by a multitude of factors such as affordable child care and access to mental health and substance use services.

While the region has six main fields of economic activity, the forum panels focused on two of the largest fields, health and social services, and education. Health and social services, the fastest growing industry and largest employment industry in our region, was the focus of the first panel and consisted of Laurie Lamarre, Vice President of North Adams Regional Hospital(NARH) and Diana Knaebe, President and CEO of the Brien Center. Panel moderator, Bryana Malloy, guided the conversation.

Berkshire Health Systems(BHS) is the Berkshires' largest employer with 4,300 employees. Ms. Lamarre stated that they are proud to be focused on patients and partnerships that provide the tools to improve the lives of those patients and their employees. The most exciting recent developments for BHS have been the opening of NARH, which provided over 65 jobs and brought healthcare closer to home. Ms. Knaebe stated that the Brien Center was focused on recruitment and retention, growing the workforce from within. Other exciting changes were an electronic records system to relieve not only the administrative burden, but also to make it easier on patients to minimize the trauma of retelling their stories over and over. Also, advancements in digital therapies for adolescents.

Both Lamarre and Knaebe praised the value of the collaboration with educational institutions like McCann Technical High School, Massachusetts College of Liberal Arts(MCLA), and Berkshire Community College(BCC) on a "pathway program" to make sure students are getting the support they need to succeed and growing both of their workforces from within the community.

The challenges each organization faces were also similar. More jobs available than people to fill them, a lack of transportation and housing. A lack of clinicians, counselors, and EMS. Both are working hard to do what they can to support their staff with continuing education and growth within the organizations and are constantly reviewing their salaries and benefit packages to stay fair and competitive. Despite the challenges both Lamarre and Knaebe had opportunities to highlight in the industry. Knaebe spoke of the new Have Hope Recovery Center in North Adams. There is a lot of need and opportunities for licensed clinicians. Lamarre restated the need for more housing and the opportunities that it offers for developers. Finally, the panel urged the forum attendees to rethink what working in "healthcare" looks like. The job field within the industry is incredibly diverse and offers employment opportunities to almost everyone, regardless of education background.

The second and final panel, featured representatives from the education field and included Dr. Tim Callahan, Assistant Superintendent of the North Adams Public Schools(NAPS), Gina Puc, Special Assistant to the President, Director of Community Relations, and Secretary to the Board of Trustees at Williams College, and Dr. James Birge, President of MCLA. Dr. Lamb led the discussion as moderator.

The opening question was the same as it was for the first panel. What's new that you are most excited about within your organization?

Dr. Birge answered first, stating that he was most excited about MCLA's plans to offer a Masters program and degree in Social Work. Currently, they are working on securing the resources to support this program. He also mentioned the new hockey program was bringing new families to visit the area, offering a little boost to the local economy.

Ms. Puc was most excited about the imminent plans for construction on the new Williams College Museum of Art(WCMA) that will not only employ local contractors during the three year construction process, but once completed will be a treasured asset with free admission to the community.

Dr. Callahan chimed in last to say that the upcoming Greylock School building project and education pathway partnerships, like the Dury Early College program, were what he was most excited about.

Next the panel tackled their biggest challenges. Dr. Callahan lamented two major challenges. First, there are more jobs than people, a common challenge echoed by the group. This staffing shortage included substitute teachers, creating situations where administrators like himself are having to step in to teach classes like math or science, at the expense of their administrative responsibilities. Secondly, funding is a deeply felt strain. Callahan stated that the costs related to special education were astronomical and had increased 100% in the last year. Ms. Puc stepped in next with a list of challenges, saying that filling dining services & skilled trades positions; housing & transportation issues; trying to remain competitive without taking away from student resources; and battling the perception that college educations are not as valuable or worth the cost as they used to be were all issues that Williams is currently facing. Dr. Birge echoed most of these sentiments.

The discussion was concluded on an up note with opportunities that the panelist saw in their industry. Ms. Puc stated adversity is its own opportunity, challenging Williams to be creative and transformative. They have a generous endowment to ensure accessible pathways for talented students that are highly motivated. Dr. Birge pointed out that a college education at MCLA is currently free to eligible students, those whose families make less than $75k/annually, and is free to all commuters and transfers from BCC and UMASS. Lastly, Mr. Callahan shared simply that the students were the bright spot he sees in our collective future. He shared the recent experience of listening to a 6th grade class discuss their ideas for alternative energy through critical thinking and leaving the experience feeling confident about the future. He is also excited about the upcoming Portrait of a Graduate grant programming. On that final uplifting note, the forum concluded.

Please join us for the next forum on December 13, 2025 from 10:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m. at the First Congregational Church of Williamstown, located at 906 Main Street, Williamstown. The topic will be the Status of Parents in North Berkshire: Parental Mental Health.

Family Holiday Budget Tips

It's that time of year already, you know the one where people are going crazy, trying to fit in their holiday shopping and stay on a budget. Every year I know I say, "oh next year I'm going to start shopping earlier so I'm not so stressed". If you're like me and everyone else I know, it usually doesn't work out that way. How can we teach our children and ourselves that more isn't always better? I'm going to give you some ideas on how to stay on a budget for the holidays AND keep you and your children happy.

Here are some helpful tips;

- Each pay week, set aside a certain amount either in a savings account or in a jar in your house and be faithful to it.
- Another way to try and save a little money is to collect loose change and put it in a jar, it can really add up.
- Have a family meeting, and talk with your kids about your budget and why it is important for you to stick to it. (Age-appropriate of course)
- During the year, volunteer with your children at your local food pantries, or churches so they get the opportunity to see people that aren't as fortunate as they are, it will change their outlook on other people and they can self- reflect on that.
- Homemade gifts are the best! And it will strengthen your bond with your children. You can make ornaments, jams, holiday cards, mason jar cocoa or you can use a clear frosting sleeve and put the ingredients in instead.
- In the Spring, help your children go through their toys and ask them to donate "gently" used toys for the holidays. (It's a win, win, you're helping out children and cleaning out the clutter).
- For your children's gifts instead of presents, maybe talk about a family vacation, and as a gift give them "accessories", that will give them a hint.

Holiday Tips with Young Children

- Simplify your priorities
- It's OK to not please everyone. Manage relatives expectations.
- Make homemade gifts instead of buying gifts, or pick names from a hat to only buy for the person you choose.
- Talk to your kids before going somewhere that can get overwhelming for you & them. Have a code word to let each other know when you've had enough without hurting anyone's feelings.
- Clarify your expectations of them before you go.
- Be prepared with whatever will keep your little one from having any meltdowns.
- Encourage gratitude with your children.
- Don't force them to hug relatives they aren't comfortable around; it's OK. Try high-fives or a fist bump instead.
- Try to keep their naps & schedules as a close as possible.
- Laugh! Have a sense of humor with whatever comes your way and enjoy your time with your family & friends.

THE NEIGHBORLIES 2024

November at the Coalition means our favorite annual event, the Neighborlies! This evening of community recognition that celebrates our friends and neighbors for their kindness, selflessness, and volunteerism with Neighborly awards is a perfect way to honor a month that is all about gratitude.

MCLA once again played gracious host to our event in their beautiful Church Street Center space. The night kicked off with refreshments and lots of hugs as the Williams College Ephlats greeted attendees with their incredible a capella music as community members began to filter into the space. State Representative John Barrett III and North Adams Mayor Jennifer Macksey were kind enough to join us to congratulate the awardees and pose for photos with everyone.

MCLA's Chief of Staff, Josh Mendel offered a warm welcome to the crowd before passing the mic over to Coalition E.D. Amber Besaw. Amber reflected on the importance of seeing and celebrating the good deeds and experiences, big and small, especially in these tumultuous times. She also took a moment to acknowledge that the day was also World Day of Remembrance.

This year we honored over 120 individuals for their selfless acts in the categories of Family Support, Businesses & Groups Pulling Together, Neighborly Acts, Youth Taking the Lead and Community Health & Wellness. Ben Lamb, nbCC Board President, presented the first category of awards for Businesses & Groups Pulling Together. Among the eighteen awardees were long standing community club, the North Adams

Fraternal Order of the Elks, who were nominated for continuously donating generously to the Drury High School Band and the North Adams Public Schools music program through the DHS band. This year they donated $6,000 that was used to purchase new instruments for the band and music programs. Alongside the Elks were newcomers, North Adams Community Housing Organization (NACHO), nominated for taking on the issue of affordable community housing in a meaningful, data informed, and tactical way rarely seen before.

In the Community Health & Wellness category, seventeen groups or individuals were recognized for deeds as simple as donating bikes to the Bike Collective and coaching youth soccer and basketball, and as complex as supporting others in their struggles with sobriety and homelessness.

There were a total of twelve local youth celebrated for their volunteer efforts in the community. River Bourassa-Pitroff and Willoughby Lamb were the youngest honorees of the night. River received her Neighborly “For being Heart & Soil Collective’s youngest volunteer- at 3 years old- helping deliver fresh veggies (and smiles!) to seniors in Adams” and Willoughby received her award “For joining the Otto’s Farm Stand team and for spreading joy by caring for and sharing her beautiful flower bouquets.”

Neighborly Acts drew the largest number of awardees this year with over sixty individuals being celebrated. The largest group of the evening , consisting of twenty-two folks, was recognized for their “tireless efforts on supporting the Greylock Elementary School Building Project.” While Family Support drew the smallest group, but some of the sweetest submissions like, “She is my grandma. She is the best person ever!”

This year’s Steve Green Neighbor of Year recipient, Mary Jirkovsky, was unable to join us, but was celebrated as “a dedicated educator, volunteer, and neighbor who consistently lends her time and talents to support others. She has served on the UNO Steering Committee for several years and has spent countless hours helping to host community events and programs, including her afterschool program for school-age youth. What truly sets Mary apart is not only the time she invests but also her remarkable character. She takes the time to get to know her neighbors personally and always greets them with warmth and kindness whenever they cross paths. She meets everyone with positive energy, and she embodies what the Neighborlies are about—being a true supporter of her neighbors and an engaged member of the community.”

We had such a great evening and look forward to doing it all again next year, on Wednesday, November 19, 2025. Until then we encourage you to submit your favorite local do-gooder for a 2025 Neighborly!
