The goal of this lecture series is to provide educational insights about future developments in five different areas of medical care. These include: healthcare financing, orthopedic surgery and joint replacement options, the role of 3D printing in various types of surgery, early drug development in cancer care, and new directions in depression research. Attention will be paid to current best practices, ethical implications of new technologies, promotion of consumer education and choices, and financial aspects of delivery. A lively discussion is anticipated for each lecture regarding the many issues raised by these trends and technologies.
