

WOMEN IN PUBLIC SERVICE

Women in Public Service (WPS) is an association of public service professionals created to inspire past, current, and future generations by addressing topics relevant to women in public service, while instilling knowledge through education, networking and professional development that strengthens the leadership in our local government and communities.

Exploring My Role: Am I a public service professional?

A woman in public service is an individual who dedicates herself to serving the community. These roles encompass diverse professions, such as educators molding young minds, healthcare professionals ensuring public well-being, and government officials and nonprofit organizations addressing societal needs. If you serve the community in any form, public or private, you are a public servant.
