Leadership Opportunity Associate Vice President, Medical Services

The Opportunity

The role of Associate Vice President, Medical Services is a unique clinician leadership role in college health. Overseeing one of six departments in Columbia Health, the incumbent will manage a team of almost sixty clinical and non-clinical staff, and ensure the provision of comprehensive, student-centered care to more than 28,000 students on the Columbia Morningside and Manhattanville campuses and our affiliates Teachers College, Jewish Theological Seminary, and Union Theological Seminary.

Dr. Brenda Aiken is retiring after 13 years of service in the role and 24 years at Columbia Health. She has been a dedicated leader providing direction, mentoring, and support to generations of medical students and staff.

Under the leadership of the Senior Vice President (SVP), Columbia Health, the Associate Vice President, Medical Services (MS), provides overall leadership of the medical service, identifying strategic goals and maintaining suitable policies and procedures regarding the delivery of services and program development. Utilizing both medical and administrative experience, the AVP oversees the day-to-day functions of Medical Services, including Primary Care Practice Teams; telehealth programs; travel-related health; the clinical laboratory; Quality Management (QM) Program; gender-affirming and gender-specific care; after-hours care; athletic medicine, embedded behavioral health, nutrition services; acupuncture services; and the Continuing Medical Education program. Additionally, the incumbent will oversee the medical director responsibilities of CU-EMS (campus student volunteer ambulance service).

COLUMBIA HEALTH

The AVP directs the work of medical providers, technicians, and support staff involved in providing primary care, urgent and emergency care, specialty services, and laboratory services. They organize providers and assure provision of high-quality care by building understanding of student health needs, reviewing care provided, fostering communication among and between staff, and securing necessary resources. The AVP develops and sustains collaboration among staff, University stakeholders, and the upper Manhattan specialist and hospital networks, to ensure a smoother flow of patients, continuity of care, and quality management.

Columbia Health seeks to provide industry leading care offered by college health experts. To deliver on our mission and vision, we continually strive to improve the quality of programs, services, and resources. Enabling the delivery of excellence in care, we strive to have a motivated team of highly qualified staff. This key leadership role will allow the next Associate Vice President the opportunity to build on a solid foundation of excellence in Medical Services and continue to innovate and push the work forward. Columbia is seeking a talented clinician leader to join our team and lead our Medical Services into the future.

About Columbia University

Columbia University is one of the world's most important research centers and a distinctive and distinguished learning environment for undergraduates and graduate students in many scholarly and professional fields. The University recognizes the importance of its location in New York City and seeks to link its research and teaching to the vast resources of a great metropolis. It seeks to attract a diverse and international faculty, staff, and student body, to support research and teaching on global issues, and to create academic relationships with many countries and regions. It expects all areas of the University to advance knowledge and learning at the highest level and to convey the products of its efforts to the world.

From its founding in 1754 (as Kings College, now Columbia College), Columbia has grown to be a world-class University with 3 primary campuses in Manhattan, two suburban locations, and 11 global centers across 4 continents. Enrolling more than 30,000 students, with the majority of them being in graduate or professional degree programs, Columbia is continuing to build and grow to meet the needs of 21st Century society. Offering degree and certificate programs across 17 schools and colleges, along with 4 additional affiliated institutions, Columbia leverages its location in New York to attract and retain the best and brightest students, faculty, and staff.

Now led by Nemat “Minouche” Shafik, Columbia is positioned to continue the classic higher education missions of research, teaching, and community service, along with our identified 4th purpose - to leverage scholarly knowledge to create societal and global impact, in close partnership with organizations outside academia. We invite you to learn more about the University online.
