Saint Vincent College Tour

Our YMWIC Scholars recently enjoyed an unforgettable visit to Saint Vincent College in Latrobe, Pennsylvania, packed with hands-on activities and engaging learning experiences. From the moment they arrived, the day was filled with excitement and discovery.

One standout moment was the science experiment where Scholars mixed chemicals to create a banana pudding scent, sparking their curiosity in chemistry through a fun and interactive activity. This hands-on experiment was a big hit and got everyone excited about the possibilities within the field of science.

The Scholars also had the opportunity to meet and work with one of the university's health professors, where they delved into important health and wellness topics. Their engagement and thoughtful questions made the session even more meaningful. The campus tour that followed took them through the dorms and other student and community spaces which offered an inspiring glimpse into college life.

Our Scholars didn't miss a beat when it came to asking insightful questions of both professors and alumni, showcasing their thirst for knowledge and leaving a great impression on those they met. Their curiosity and eagerness were evident throughout the entire two-day experience.

To cap off the day, the Scholars enjoyed a wide variety of delicious food in the Community Center, an all-you-care-to eat dining hall, which added a fun and memorable end to their visit.

The trip to Saint Vincent College not only broadened their perspectives but also deepened their excitement for higher education, giving our Scholars a real taste of college life and the opportunities that await them.
