Scholar Spotlight

Tyler Williams Upper Darby Chapter

We are excited to highlight Tyler Williams, an 11th grade student at Upper Darby High School, for our Upper Darby Chapter this month. Tyler joined YMWIC in the 9th grade and has been an active participant ever since, finding great value in the Foundation's offerings. One of the aspects he enjoys most is the SIGs (Special Interest Groups), which he says provide a strong sense of community and allows him to connect with others who share similar passions.

Over the years, YMWIC has had a significant impact on Tyler's personal development, particularly in helping him step out of his comfort zone during presentations. He notes how the Foundation has given him the confidence to improve his public speaking skills, a valuable asset for his future.

Tyler aspires to become a Sports Statistic Analyzer after graduating high school, and he already has his sights set on several colleges including Syracuse University, Temple University, Rice University, and Neumann University. When asked what advice he would give to younger or new YMWIC Scholars, he emphasizes the importance of trusting the process and recognizing the staff truly cares about each Scholar's success.

In addition to his academic pursuits, Tyler has earned the Distinguished Honor Roll and was awarded Most Distinguished Honors for American Studies. Outside of the classroom, he is involved in both sports and intellectual activities, being a member of the track and field throwing teams, as well as the chess team. In his free time, Tyler enjoys bowling and playing chess, further showcasing his well-rounded interests.

When asked what he would say to those unfamiliar with YMWIC, Tyler enthusiastically responded, "The information is priceless and somehow free!" His words capture the value of the Foundation and its impact on young Scholars.

We are proud of Tyler's accomplishments and look forward to his continued success within YMWIC and beyond.
