Scholar Spotlight

Romario Ivey Martin Luther King Chapter

Romario Ivey is an 11th-grade student at Martin Luther King High School and a proud YMWIC Foundation Scholar since the 10th grade. Romario stands out not only for his commitment to academic and personal growth but also for his dedication to leadership and service.

Romario shares that the sense of community and support he has found in YMWIC has had a profound impact on his life. "Being part of this Foundation has provided me with opportunities for personal and professional growth," he says. What he enjoys most about YMWIC are the people and the wide range of opportunities YMWIC provides.

With an eye on the future, Romario plans to join the U.S. Army after high school and is currently considering colleges such as Arcadia University and West Chester University. His advice to younger and new Foundation Scholars is, "Stay curious, always ask questions, and seek to understand the 'why' behind concepts—curiosity drives learning."

Romario is also an active athlete, playing football for Martin Luther King High School and soccer for Parkway Northeast High School. Outside of school, he focuses on improving his mental health and expanding his knowledge. He recently earned third place in the YMWIC Science Expo held at West Chester University—a testament to his hard work and determination.

To those who may not yet know about YMWIC, Romario says, "This Program is an incredible initiative designed to help young people make the right decisions in life."

We are proud to spotlight Romario and look forward to seeing all he will accomplish in the future!
