

Chandra Hooper-Barnett, Woodrow Wilson High School, has been dedicated to the field of education for more than twenty years. She has worked with students ranging from 6th through 12th grade in a variety of roles. Additionally, she has experience in the 6-12 continuum, serving as a Special Education Inclusion Teacher, Department Chair, Coach (Volleyball, Soccer, Basketball, and Track), Athletic Coordinator, Testing Coordinator, Assistant Principal at J.L. Long Middle School and Lincoln High School, Principal at J.L. Long Middle School, and most recently Woodrow Wilson High School. At each campus she has led, Chandra has cultivated a culture of collaboration and inclusion with a commitment to doing her best to help our students achieve through instructional leadership that moves every student, each day, towards career and college readiness.

She earned her bachelor's in Social Work from East Texas State University, subsequently earning her Special Education, Reading, and ESL teaching certification through Region XI Certification program. After teaching for 11 years, she earned her Master of Education in Educational Administration and Masters of Education in Special Education Administration through Grand Canyon University. Chandra's Principal and Superintendent Certifications were earned at Lamar University. All in all, she has served as a campus administrator for 10 years while mentoring new principals.

Chandra and her twin sister were born in Dallas, Texas and attended Dallas ISD schools until they moved to El Paso, Texas where they graduated from J.M. Hanks High School. Both of Chandra's children attended Dallas ISD schools including the middle school she led. Her eldest son graduated from Skyline High School and the youngest from Woodrow Wilson High School. Chandra enjoys shopping, reading, and traveling.