Amir H. Boroujerdi, MBA/MEd
Principal, JL Long MS

Amir H. Boroujerdi was born in Tehran, Iran, and moved to North Texas when he was 7 years old. He grew up in Dallas, Richardson and Plano. He attended the University of Texas at Austin, where he graduated with a degree in Spanish language, literature, history and culture. Mr. Boroujerdi has an MBA from Hardin-Simmons University and a Master of Education in Educational Technology Leadership from Lamar University.

His first full-time job in education after college was as a Spanish teacher and a football and baseball coach at Woodrow. Since then, he's worked at North Dallas High School as a reconnection center facilitator, Skyline High School as an assistant-principal intern, and Molina High School as an assistant principal. Mr. Boroujerdi also worked for 5 years as a coordinator in the Student Services Department of the Dallas ISD with a focus in student discipline, emergency management, and transportation.

Mr. Boroujerdi comes from a family of professional and public servants. His mother was a high school principal in Iran, his father was a deputy minister of education in Iran, and his sister is currently an art teacher in Garland ISD. Amir is passionate about public education, serving his community, and bringing equity and opportunity for all.
