

OZ'S NEW ENGAGEMENT COORDINATOR

We are delighted to introduce Sophie Miller as our full-time Engagement Coordinator. Sophie will play a key role in enhancing your OZ experience. Her responsibilities will support your engagement with our three pillars: Social Justice, Center for Jewish Life, and Religious/Spiritual life.

Sophie will support our need to increase communication with our community, informing you of all the events, programming, and services that OZ has to offer. She will be directly responsible for managing our website, distributing our weekly email announcements, managing our social channels, and in general, enhancing the effectiveness of our committees and working toward strengthening relationships between congregants and OZ.

Sophie comes to OZ and Burlington from Northern New Jersey. She graduated from Binghamton University in 2020 with a BA in English Literature. Most recently, Sophie worked as a reporter with TAPinto Ridgewood, a local newspaper covering government meetings, arts and culture and more.

Sophie writes to say hello and introduce herself:

I am so excited to join the OZ team. The focus of my role as Engagement Coordinator includes:

- Working with clergy, staff, and volunteers to help build our community through in-person and online engagement. This includes OZ's website, emails and social media.
- Helping make OZ's spiritual, cultural, social justice and educational programs and experiences successful.
- Acting as a point of contact for our community and membership. I'll interact with current members, welcome potential new members and support outreach.

I'll use the coming weeks to listen and learn while I hit the ground running.

I will be working remotely from my home in New Jersey until I can be here in person come early August.

I look forward to meeting many of you this summer and fall!

All the best,
Sophie
