

LUNCH & LEARN

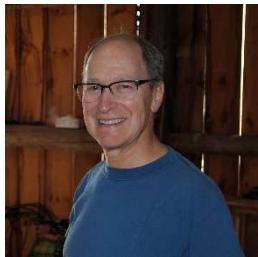

Lunch (at home) & Learn (with us) in the Days of COVID-19!

As you know, OZ's Lunch & Learn programs have traditionally been held at noon on the third Thursday of the month (unless otherwise noted) from September or October through May.

You may also know that there are a series of virtual noontime gatherings for OZers and friends every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. David Brown, host of the Thursday Zoom chats, has graciously consented to allow Lunch & Learn to hold to tradition and offer our presentations on the third Thursday of each month, beginning in October. Thank you very much, David, and thanks to the Thursday "chatters" for accommodating the 2020/2021 L&L series.

Please join us on the following days for our first three programs:

Thursday, October 15

Paul Growald, longtime OZ member, will lead a discussion about Stopping Stones, an historical reparations endeavor that seeks to call attention to the persons and places impacted by slavery by embedding a memorial stone in the sidewalk in front of the homes in which the slaves lived. Paul will talk about his inspiration for initiating

Stopping Stones and inform us about how the project is progressing.

The Interfaith/Social Action Committee is co-sponsoring this event.

(See Social Action column to learn about the relevance of Stopping Stones here in Vermont).

Thursday, November 19

Garrison Nelson, UVM Professor Emeritus of Political Science, looks at results of the 2020 election (whatever they may be)! Erudite and irreverent, Prof. Nelson will share his insights and thoughts about what might lie ahead.

Thursday, December 17

Natalie Neuert, Director of the UVM Lane Series and teacher in the Department of Music and the Jewish Studies Program, will discuss Four Pioneering Jewish Émigré Artists of the Weimar Republic (1919-1933): Kurt Weill (music/theater), Marcel Breuer (design/architecture), Felix Nussbaum (art) and Stefan Zweig (literature).

Grab a salad or a sandwich and join us via Zoom for OZ's Lunch & Learn 2020/2021 series!

Watch for further information about dates and programming in the new year.