There is a legend that someone once asked Ernest Hemingway to write a story using only six words. His response? "For sale: Baby Shoes, Never worn." Since then, the idea of a "Six-Word Story" has grown in popularity. One article defines it as "a short narrative that can have all of the emotional themes of longer stories- from funny to dramatic, sad to scary. They have a subject and verb that give the reader a sense of what's happened and a bit of conflict."

Here are the "Six-Word Stories" written by our recent graduates:

Maya Alford- "INSERT HERE"

Aidan Baumert- "Graduation already? I just got here."

Mya Booker- "Dreaming big. Learning fast. Endless possibilities."

Brandon Ellis- "INSERT HERE"

Taylor Ellis- "INSERT HERE"

DeMarley Forrester- "Attitude brings achievement with Gods blessing"

Rayliana Giaccone- "Tested in school, strengthened in prayer."

Trish Giaccone- "Education paves the road to freedom"

Alexis Hanna- "Serving, Seeking, Sondering, Solving, and Soul."

Ashley Harrison- "I'm only in my first chapter."

Precious Johnson- "Trust God and go get it!"

Maddie Mannino- "Diploma in hand, future wide open."

Asha Mahri - "Faith built me. Education propelled."

Erica Rimstidt- "My family is all my strength."

Chloe Wallace- "The best is yet to come."

But did you know that the original six-word story, the most important in history, first coined two-thousand years ago, is in the Bible? It is a simple, clear narrative that appears fourteen times in the gospels, in Acts, and in Paul's letters: "God Raised Jesus from the dead" Romans 8:11

Our graduation and worship celebrations are awesome. By the way, my six words are "Thank You Laude! Thank You Laude!"
