

As the son of a career Air Force OSI special agent, Chris Gaubatz grew up in England, Korea, California, and Utah, and today calls southwest Virginia home.

Chris worked for several 500 Fortune companies conducting fraud investigations and asset protection as well as insurance sales.

In 2007, Chris began researching the threat of jihadi organizations in the U.S. by posing as a Muslim convert and attending Muslim Brotherhood/Hamas conferences gaining access as an intern with the Hamas organization Council on American Islamic Relations (CAIR) in Virginia.

While working at the CAIR Maryland/Virginia office, Chris uncovered a fraud scheme being perpetuated by CAIR's "immigration" attorney who was defrauding Muslims in the community and lying about the handling of their immigration proceedings. In fact, he was not even a licensed attorney. When that office was shut down by CAIR in an effort to conceal this criminal activity, Chris was invited by Hamas / CAIR leaders to work at their HQ office in Washington, D.C.

During his time there, Chris obtained over 12,000 pages of documents from Hamas / CAIR and over 300 hours of covert audio/video recordings.

The entire story is featured in the book Muslim Mafia authored by investigative journalist Paul Sperry and Dave Gaubatz (Chris' father).

June 28, 2016, Chris testified at the Senate Judiciary Committee. Willful Blindness: Consequences of Agency Efforts to De-emphasize Radical Islam in Combating Terrorism Subcommittee on Oversight, Agency Action, Federal Rights and Federal Courts.
