

Hunterdon Freeholders Honor Polytech Students Recognize February As Career And Technical Education Month

The Hunterdon County Board of Chosen Freeholders during the February 5th meeting honored five students enrolled at the Hunterdon County Polytech for their scholastic achievements.

The Freeholders recognized Maya Sorhage, 3D Computer animation program, Estelle Yeung, Biomedical Sciences Academy, Mollie Zimm and Ashlee Gibbons, Animal Science Program, and Irma Garcia-Lazo, Adult & Continuing Education Aesthetics/Skin Care Licensing Program, for their achievements in their areas of study.

Freeholder Director Suzanne Lagay said, "Each of these young women at the Polytech has set serious goals which can propel them into further education or work in their field. Today's student must have focus and the necessary educational and technical background to advance. Career and technical schools training does that for them and we are grateful these students are prepared to have a successful future."

The Freeholder Board also designated February 2019 as "Career and Technical Education Month" and recognized that Hunterdon County's Vocational School District expands individual opportunities and helps students meet the needs in the 21st century workplace.

Lebanon business owner Anne Thornton was also honored by the Freeholders for her recognition as 2018 Business Partner of the Year by the County's Vocational School.
