THERE USED TO BE A RAILROAD ~ Sunday, March 3

New Jersey and railroads go way back, all the way to 1815 when the state granted John Stevens of Hoboken the first railroad charter in the U.S. Although Stevens's New Jersey Railroad was never constructed, the Camden & Amboy Railroad, under the direction of Stevens's sons, began service between South Amboy and Bordentown in 1833, the first of many railroads to lay track across the Garden State. This program provides a glimpse of a New Jersey long gone—one in which you could get practically anywhere by rail.

THIRTY SECONDS OVER TEETERTOWN ~ Sunday, April 7

Dramatic aerial images of New Jersey "then and now" contrasting historic photographs of NJ scenes from the 1920s-1940s with recent views of the same sites.

Covers everything from inventions and innovations to lost industries and amusement parks (including "Atlantic Beach"), modes of travel, and more, with many "hidden history" tidbits about the Bayshore and Monmouth County.
