Intro to Applied Behavior Analysis (ABA) in the Home and Community
This class will be in-person.

Parents, caregivers, teachers, coaches, and others: are you looking for a more effective way to motivate positive behavior or promote cooperation from someone you care for or work with? DDRC's Behavioral Health Team is hosting a free training on this, applicable to different ages and settings.

This training will provide a better understanding on the process of how human behavior is created, maintained, and improved, and aims to help participants make decisions for possible behavior motivation. The goal of this training is to help the person in your care feel their needs and wants are being addressed in a predictable way while respecting their personal values. After the training, class attendees will be able to identify key elements needed to improve behavioral supports and provide more rounded behavioral support themselves.

The class is based on Applied Behavior Analysis concepts and is conducted by DDRC's Behavioral Health Team Manager - Zach Maple. Zach, a Board-Certified Behavior Analyst and Licensed Professional Counselor, has worked in this field since 2008, and has experience working with multiple populations within the lifespan. He has also published research in the application of ABA interventions.
