With a childhood surrounded by farmland, livestock, and poultry in the Midwest USA, it is no surprise that Doug Rideout loves seeing things grow. The Arkansas native has fallen in love with the U.S. Virgin Islands and is eager to do his part to bring economic growth to his "other home."

Doug Rideout, a U.S. military veteran, serves as the Chief Executive Officer of M1 Enterprises. As such, he is responsible for business development while overseeing the organization's ongoing expansion efforts, including the U.S. Virgin Islands.

This vision focuses on in-demand healthcare and technology remote workforce job training. In addition to supporting workforce development, the newly formed M1 Enterprises USVI, LLC brings decades of revenue cycle consulting experience and knowledge to the U.S. Virgin Islands healthcare systems. This company is merging two M1 organization companies into one U.S. company that provides twenty-five years of healthcare knowledge and job training for nationally recognized certifications to support healthcare and technology services. Doug has chosen the Big Island of St. Croix as a home base for the new USVI entity; however, it will serve the entire Territory and provide remote services to the U.S. mainland.

You ask what M1 Enterprises USVI, LLC will bring to the U.S. Virgin Islands. The company's founder says it combines revenue cycle consulting and remote workforce development experience. Together, this creates the ideal economic development engine that will produce healthcare and technology remote workforce jobs for the Territory. Mr. Rideout believes that a highly trained remote workforce will change the future of economic development for us here.

Doug and his wife, Shelly Rideout, have moved to the U.S. Virgin Islands and will continue to expand the M1 organization's footprint, focusing on training and promoting growth in the Territory's emerging remote workforce. They believe this will have a long-lasting positive impact on the families within our islands.
