Local Color Gallery Welcomes New Member Artist

On Friday, March 28, Local Color Gallery will host its second Fourth Friday Event, from 5 to 7 pm. New gallery member artist Deb Bergman will give a short artist talk at 5:30. The work of guest artist Sumner Roberts continues on display, and the members of Local Color will be showing new works as well.

Maine artist Deb Bergman likes to call painting her “third chapter,” after her career in nurse-midwifery and as owner of a fiber arts shop in Stockton Springs. Now living in Orono, Maine, Bergman has rediscovered her love for studio art and has studied art at the University of Maine and through workshops. She works in acrylics, oils, and mixed media.

Bergman cites her wide travel experience as a source of artistic inspiration. About her body of work she says, “I love to take an image from everyday life and recreate it so others can see what I see. In these days of chaos and turmoil, I hope my work brings a sense of tranquility and peace to the viewer.” Her work can be found in private collections in the US and Sweden and is currently sold in several venues in Maine. Her work may be seen at Local Color beginning Wednesday, March 26.

Local Color Gallery is located at 135 High Street in Belfast. Winter hours are 11 to 4, Wednesday through Saturday. Beginning April 1, open hours change to Tuesday through Saturday, 11 to 5 and Sunday 11 to 4. Please visit www.localcolorgallerymaine.org, or call 207-218-1249 for more information.
