

April 21, 2022
For Immediate Release
Belfast Free Library
Re: Virtual Talk Past Perspectives on Climate Change in Belfast, Maine

On Tuesday May 10th, 6:30 pm the Belfast Free Library will host a virtual talk with Emma C. Moesswilde, “Living With Thin Ice: Past Perspectives on Climate Change in Belfast, Maine” This presentation is part of the ongoing series of programs for the All of Belfast Climate Dialogues, a project of the Belfast Free Library.

Please register for this virtual presentation by going to belfastlibrary.org/abcd-events.

How did Mainers experience climate change in the past? What might this history tell us about the present and future in light of the current climate crisis? This talk recounts the history of climate change and its impacts on Maine’s people and landscapes. Using historical records and recent data from climate scientists, Moesswilde will highlight the long and varied history of adaptations to extreme weather in Maine through stories of past experiences of climate change. Using the example of Belfast and midcoast Maine, the talk outlines how and why climate history can offer valuable perspectives on climate change today, and what lessons the past might hold for current climate change conversations.

Emma C. Moesswilde is a doctoral candidate in the Department of History at Georgetown University. Her dissertation project investigates the relationships between climate change and agricultural practice by examining rural experiences seasonal variability across the British Northern Atlantic from 1540-1816.

Born and raised in midcoast Maine, Emma has lived and worked in rural communities and environments for much of her life, including projects with Maine Farmland Trust and Maine Conservation Voters. She graduated with a B.A. cum laude in History and Environmental Studies from Bowdoin College in 2018, and also holds an M.A. in History from Georgetown. Her scholarly work has contributed to publications such as Nature and H-Environment and been featured in Active History and NiCHE. Emma also co-hosts the podcast Climate History. She lives in Washington, D.C.

Speaker Emma C. Moesswilde