Maine Essays

Michael D. Burke

Michael Burke is the author of this collection of twenty-five essays that explore the richness of life in Maine—from county fairs and sea kayaking to fiddle heading and maple sugaring. His writing is a celebration of the “Other Maine,” a place of quiet beauty and deep-rooted stories that often go untold.

Michael holds a B.A. in Philosophy from the University of California at Berkeley and an M.F.A. in Fiction from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. He is Professor Emeritus of Creative Writing and English at Colby College.
