

Admirable Quality Opinion

By:Deron Sayles

I am relating Tom to a Sour Patch Kid because he has two sides. One sour one sweet, Today I will talk about his sweet side... His most admirable quality. His most admirable character trait in my opinion is his ability to have fun and play whenever he gets the chance to. His good side is way better just like a sour patch kid. Like when you eat one and wait for the sour to go so you can get that sweet flavor before you swallow it. Or some people just bite it right away but you still get the fruity flavor. Anyway, let's get back to Tom.

He is very playful in "Games in The Woods", When he is sword fighting with Joe based on Robin Hood. It was cool that they have so much energy to play that much. It's always better to have someone fun and playful around. It just makes everything fun and better. They also said what was said in the book, dressed as the characters, and acted like them. That takes some reading talent to do all that. Or just a lot of movie watching.

Also in "Camp Life" when the kids went swimming almost every hour of the trip. And I'm pretty sure they played games in the water while they were swimming. Like Marco Polo, Color, Who can hold their breath the longest, and just jumping in the water for fun. So they should be having lots of fun then too.

Another trait on the sweet side is when Tom is adventurous. And being adventurous means a lot of playing and good times. Like going in a creek with a stick. Your probably going to play with the sticks. Like in "Camp Life", he is adventurous, and in "Toms Secret", too. So as you can see Tom is an adventurous boy that makes fun out of the place around him and pretty much everything else.

Well there you have it, Sour Patch Kid Tom loves to have fun and he also has two sides to him just like a Sour Patch Kid. One sweet one sour. Now you know a lot about the sweet one. I would love to have a friend that is as fun and adventurous as Tom, and I hope you would too.
