The U.S. Election and Its Impact on Great Lakes and St. Lawrence River Issues

The conclusion of the U.S. presidential election will have a profound impact on the important issues facing our region and the health and sustainability of our lakes and river.

The start of a new presidential administration brings much excitement. The incoming Biden Administration has signaled a commitment to many of our organization's most urgent priorities.

"President-Elect Biden has shown a strong commitment to both water infrastructure funding, water equity issues and environmental initiatives," said Mayor Mike Vandersteen, Chair of the Cities Initiative. "We will work closely with the incoming administration on their plans for the first 100 days to ensure our priorities are addressed."

As we enter the New Year, we will be working with our allies in Congress on both sides of the aisle to ensure the critical issues facing our cities are addressed in a timely manner.
