

2019 Fall Early Childhood Conference “Prescription for Play”

Friday, October 18, 2019

8:30 am - 1:00 pm

Shaarei Tikvah Synagogue

46 Fox Meadow Road, Scarsdale, NY 10583

Keynote Address — Rick Ellis, MSED “PLAY: IT’S NOT A FOUR-LETTER WORD!”

The keynote will address why it’s not only fine for children to learn through play but that they MUST do so in order to become individuals! We will hear about what constitutes appropriate play and learn some of the key factors that educators need to be able to do in order to define this precious time in a child’s life!

Rick Ellis, MSED teaches at Continuing Professional Studies at Bank Street College and has been involved in the fields of early childhood and elementary education for 33 years. He has taught infants through nine-year-olds and has also worked as a teaching coach/unit leader, mentor, administrator, and instructional computer coordinator. Mr. Ellis was trained in Reggio-Emilia, Italy. He recently worked for the NJ State Department of Early Childhood Education in creating the core curriculum standards.

Infant Toddler

Session A: Messy Play with Babies!

Jen Longley & Jen Gilken, Assistant Professors - Borough of Manhattan Community College (BMCC)-CUNY

This participatory, interactive workshop will introduce attendees to five developmentally appropriate play activities that can be used with infants in classroom settings. Participants will have the opportunity to play with the materials!

Session B: Facilitating Playful Learning for Infants and Toddlers

Sori Palacio, Adjunct Professor - BMCC-CUNY & Assistant Director - BMCC-CUNY Early Childhood Center

We will see how play for young children can serve as a natural way for them to learn regardless of their different abilities.

Session C: Infant and Toddler Play: How Play Can Create Social Emotional Competence

Dr. Gloria Pope, Executive Director - CAG-Mt. Vernon WestCOP

This session will focus on social emotional growth through play for infants and toddlers. We will look at strategies to use in classrooms and the importance of developmental milestones.

Preschool

Session D: Innovative Thinking in the Early Childhood Classroom

Sasha Wilson, Associate Director - Montclare Children's School, NYC

How do we inspire, motivate and prepare students for the future? We will explore design thinking as an innovative process that will help children problem solve and encourage children to think outside the box.

Session E: Knee-High Nature: Study and Explore

Marissa Close, Assistant Director - The Nature of Things

Children begin to investigate their world with a sense of wonder and love for its creatures and its beauties. We will explore ways that teachers can develop good questioning skills and techniques about the natural world and how children can appreciate and protect it.

Session F: Play: What is it Good For?

Vicki L. Messina, Special Education Teacher

Discover the POWER of observing children at play and how what you learn will help you to better understand the children. Learn how observing play can lead you to better planning.

All Ages

Session G: Oh Those Boys!

Rick Ellis, MEd, Keynote presenter

Schools have traditionally been designed for female learning. Sadly, boys more than girls end up disliking school and are misunderstood by many teachers. We'll look at the differences between boy and girl learning today as well as talk about practical applications that teachers can begin doing to accommodate boys.

Session H: Creating Playful Gender Expansive Culture in Early Childhood Communities

Wendy Cole, Executive Director & Jennifer Smith, Program Director - The Maple Street School, Brooklyn

We will talk about rituals, surprises and doing activities including button making, making magic wands and more that are about self expression, being who you are, belonging and inclusion.

Session I: Best Practices in Recognizing the Typical and Atypical Child in Your Classroom

Betty Jane Bullen, Executive Director - Castleton Hill Moravian Church Preschool & Christine Madaio DiStasio - Special Education Consultant

We will focus on helping families look for guidance and support in identifying the most appropriate environment for their child and how to create that environment while matching the child's developmental stage and learning potential.
