

For its' November 2nd First Friday Play Reading the Grace St. Paul's Spirit Players presents "November" by David Mamet. If you're exasperated with the upcoming elections, this Oval Office satire (called "Maniacally funny" by the Associated Press) should take your minds off current politics.

We will meet Charles Smith, a beleaguered U.S. President whose chances of reelection are grim. His approval ratings are down, campaign funding nearly non-existent, and his staff has thrown in the towel. When he asks his Chief of Staff why voters don't like him, the Chief responds, "Because you're still here". Will there be a Presidential library? Nuclear war in Iran? Or is it Iraq? Does more than one turkey get pardoned?

For the answers to these and less pressing questions, please join us on November 2 at 6:30 p.m. in the Bloom Room to read this hilarious comedy. Attendees may read if they wish or participate as "audience"; scripts are provided. Sharon McKenzie and Nanalee Raphael are the facilitators, both long-time theatre aficionados. This script has language unsuitable for teens and younger. (It is David Mamet, after all.)

There is no admission charge, however a donation of canned food such as hearty soup, ravioli, chili or tuna for the Joseph's Food Pantry at Grace St. Paul's would be greatly appreciated.
