

PHYSICAL THREAT ASSESSMENT & MANAGEMENT

in Clinical Practice

May 18, 2018
9:00am - 3:30pm

5 HOURS of CE credit

Willingway
311 Jones Mill Road
Statesboro, GA

Contact:
Janis Ellington, CAC II
jellington@summitbhc.com
912-678-4480

FACILITATOR: Barbara Melton, M.Ed., LPC, LPCS, NCC/MAC, CACII has had a private practice in downtown Charleston since 1991 and has taught various courses at Columbia College, Coastal Carolina University, and Webster. One of her specialties is working with victims of trauma.

There is so much violence in the news these days.

In this training, we will discuss assessing potential for violence (risk/threat assessment) in your caseload, practical advice as to how to handle that potential -- and if all else fails, protecting yourself in the case violence does erupt in your workplace (or school). From information gleaned about rampage school shooters and other instances where violence has been committed, we will review some of the backgrounds of these violent offenders and discuss where there were indicators that should have been heeded that these persons were dangerous. We will discuss how to proceed if we believe a person is a threat to others, as well as how to comport ourselves if we suspect we ourselves are in danger in session. Finally, we will also go over a variety of tips on how to protect yourself if violence erupts in the workplace. We will also talk about the psychological aftermath of such events.

Objectives

- Risk/Threat Assessment in Clinical Practice
- Specifics about psychological profiles of violent offenders, including discussion of Characteristics of youths who have caused school-related violent deaths
- Warnings signs of violence from childhood - how reactive attachment disorder can relate to future violence
- Tips on handling yourself in the event violence erupts in your setting
- Handling the psychological aftermath of violence

Cost To Attend

$65

Early Registration

$75

After May 7

Registration

<https://summitbhc.com/events/>

