

JOHN TROBOUGH

U.S. CONGRESSIONAL CANDIDATE

JOHN TROBOUGH is an Arizona First conservative committed to delivering strength, security, and success for every Arizona family and worker. John is a business leader and expert in today's new emerging economy. As a forward-thinking executive recognized across the technology, telecommunications, cybersecurity, artificial intelligence, and national defense industries, John has combined operational expertise with visionary leadership to pioneer strategic initiatives, elevate revenue streams, and create economic growth and jobs for the American economy.

John rose from obscurity and humble beginnings to America's C-suites and corporate boardrooms. At the age of 16, John left home, lived with friends, slept on their couches, worked blue-collar jobs, and ultimately graduated with a B.A. in Business Administration from Washington State University, complemented by an executive education from Stanford's Graduate School of Business. John still serves as a mentor to students in the Washington State business program, offering counsel and wisdom to our next generation of entrepreneurs and business leaders.

Early in his career, John served as CEO & President of subsidiaries for Fortune 50 global companies, successfully turned around private equity-backed firms, and scaled early-stage companies as an entrepreneur. Acknowledged by the White House for his exceptional contributions, John was selected to join the President's Innovation Fellowship program as a trailblazing Silicon Valley technologist during the global digital revolution.

As the Managing Partner at JLA Advisors since 2016, John's firm specializes in providing strategic consultancy services to corporate boards, C-suites, private equity and venture capital firms, focusing on the technology, media, and telecommunications sectors. John has directed transformative client engagements for prominent organizations, including Macquarie Capital, Silverlake Group, Kleiner Perkins, and The Carlyle Group, achieving success in wireless and broadband market expansion for JLA clients, SaaS company turnarounds, and strategic guidance for defense contractors in next-generation technology.

Today, John's focus is on running for the First Congressional District of Arizona. John is not driven by ambition or political aspirations, but by the opportunity to make Arizona the envy of the country. As the Republican candidate for Arizona's CD1, home to TSMC, which manufactures the wafers for the Nvidia Blackwell chipsets, John believes the United States and Arizona are at an inflection point of an economic and global leadership explosion, and the only thing standing in its way is the common government creep and capture of overregulation.

John is determined to grow the industries, technology, workers, talent, universities, junior college system, manufacturing, and infrastructure that exist right here in Arizona as an example of innovation and prosperity.

John serves as an advisor on multiple boards, including Airbus Defense, LifePlus, and Washington State University's Business and Engineering Schools. John and his wife, Amy, reside in Scottsdale and have four children.
