Taylor's Boutique Legacy

Taylor Ann Benton loved children...

She frequently babysat and nannied during her high school and college years. Even after attaining a degree in fashion merchandising and moving to California to pursue a career in that field, she would regularly care for the children of friends and others.

A sincere and faithful follower of the Lord Jesus Christ, she went to be with her Savior in December 2015 at the age of 24. It had been her ambition to one day have her own boutique, and in October 2016 the team at Daybreak determined to make that ambition a reality, naming the “baby boutique” at Daybreak Life Center in her honor.

Today “Taylor’s Boutique” serves to meet the needs of mothers, fathers and their babies by provisioning essential supplies acquired through the generous donation of others.

Those who knew her can attest to the richness and fullness of life that was Taylor’s, so it is a wonderful evidence of God’s grace that “Taylor’s Boutique” serves as a part of her legacy of her love, care, and kindness to children.
