

LEE WOODRUFF

MEDIA & PRESENTATION TRAINING

Before you began sheltering in place, you commanded a stage, conference room or TV studio to get your message across.

But now, you're boxed into a small laptop screen, suffering through glitches, frozen faces or over-talk issues as you try to connect through video conferencing. Conveying humanity, accessibility and confidence has never been more critical. And there's no better time than now to polish those skills.

How do you break through or stand out in a webinar, meeting, conference or interview? How do you ensure people focus on your message and not your bookshelf or cacti in the background?

There are tips and techniques to mastering this format. Your body language and voice create subconscious, non-verbal cues that can impact how people receive, interpret and react to your message.

As a media trainer, I've worked with executives and experts in every business sector. And now, like you, I'm grounded in my bunny slippers and confined to video training instead of being there in person.

That's why I'm offering a discounted communications training package during this challenging and unprecedented time for you or anyone in your organization who might benefit.
