Frequently Asked Questions

What is an EMT?

An EMT is an Emergency Medical Technician. These are the first responders whose duty it is to assess, stabilize and transport patients in a medical emergency. Before applying to the program, please learn everything you can about EMTs (one way to do this is to follow the the links under “EMT Basics”).

How much will this training cost me?

There is no cost for the training, as the tuition is paid for by our generous donors. However, there is a $375 fee for materials and a substantial commitment of time and dedication required to successfully complete the course.

What is ICNC?

ICNC, or the Industrial Council of Nearwest Chicago, is an organization representing hundreds of small businesses in the Chicagoland area. ICNC also owns and operates a 416,000 sq. ft. incubator facility with over 100 small business tenants. It's non-for profit organization, manages a robust workforce development department, including this training.

Who qualifies for this program?

To qualify, you must be a working female, or recently unemployed, head of household earning between $10,000-$40,000 per year. The program is geared towards women who want to work as Emergency Medical Technicians or in mid-level healthcare positions, advance in their careers and become more economically secure.

If I meet the qualifications, does that mean I'm accepted?

Not necessarily. We have a limited number of spaces available and are looking for those women who are most likely to successfully complete the program and take full advantage of this training and career opportunity.

When and where are classes being held?

Classes are typically held in our EMT training facility located at 325 N. Hoyne Ave., every Saturday from 8 AM until 4 PM. Pre-classes could begin as early as February and continue through early September. Given in-person COVID restrictions, our class will be virtual until in-class training is approved by the IDPH and the City of Chicago.

How much will I earn after I get hired as an EMT?

Earnings will vary depending on what type of position you accept and the company you chose to work for. An estimate from a large ambulance company hiring EMT's is $30,000 for the first year for a 45-hour work week. We encourage our EMT graduates to continue their education in the healthcare field. For example, EMT experience is required to become a Paramedic or ER Technician, who after a year of training, can earn a substantially higher income.

Will ICNC find me a job as an EMT?

ICNC has a successful placement program and will assist in finding you placement after you pass the licensing exam. While we do not guarantee jobs, there is a high demand for EMTs at the present time. We currently partner with multiple reputable hospitals, ambulance companies and nontraditional employers, all who have hired students from our class.

How do I apply?

Applications are only accepted online from November through the beginning of January. Please apply early to begin the process. Visit <http://www.industrialcouncil.com/emt-program.html> to apply.

What happens after I apply?

We will ask applicants who meet the minimum requirements to join us for a virtual interview.
