Mentors

Dear Friends,

Over the past few days it seems like the topic of mentors has come up again and again in conversation. A mentor is an experienced and trusted advisor – someone who can counsel you in a particular area of life. In my own life I have often sought out others to mentor me in various areas – family life, ministry, personal health, music, etc. Mentorship is not something that one typically seeks out. Rather, it is something for which a person is chosen. I, for example, might ask someone to mentor me in a particular area. Sometimes a mentor relationship simply develops over a period of time. One day I might come to realization – “Oh – they are my mentor!”

We all need support in achieving our various life goals. Perhaps our goal is to be an excellent parent. Perhaps our goal is to be a loving spouse. Perhaps our goal is to be a faithful disciple of Jesus Christ. Perhaps our goal is to be a person of honesty and integrity. Or maybe our goal is something more specific like running a 5-K or saving $1000. There are people who have been there before who can help guide us in our pursuits.

Our children need to see that we have mentors. This will enable them to be more open to the idea of having mentor's in their own life. The church is a great place to seek out and shape these relationships. We have an instant community in the Body of Christ but our relationships won't take shape without some effort on our part. Why not pray this week about the goals that God would lead you to and the people that God might bring into your life to help mentor you towards achieving those life goals.

To God be the Glory!

Robert
