For a kid, coming to the hospital can be very scary. There are new people, new machines and many new sounds. But Dayton Children's Hospital works hard to make sure everything is "just right for kids." This means they have people working around the clock to ensure kids not only feel safe at the hospital, but that they can focus on their most important job... being a kid!

Our child life specialists focus on the emotional support and developmental needs of Dayton Children's patients and families. As part of a patient's healthcare team, child life specialists help a patient cope with illness, injury, treatment and procedures. The child life staff uses play, preparation, education and self-expression activities to help children understand why they are receiving medical care.

Money donated to our child life fund helps to buy fun things for kids... everything from coloring books and games to distraction devices like iPads and special light up machines that help during procedures or medical imaging!
