

Prism Logistics adds another Central Valley warehouse

- It is its fourth Stockton facility
- Now operates 1,600,000 square feet

Following closely on its announcement of a third facility in Stockton, Prism Logistics of Danville says Thursday that it has opened a fourth facility in the inland port city.

“The lower cost of real estate in California's Central Valley is particularly attractive for our growing consumer product goods customers. And we're happy to invest in controlled, steady growth to support their success,” says Jeremy Van Puffelen, vice president of business development for Prism Logistics.

This acquisition brings the Northern California third-party logistics provider's total capacity to 1.6 million square feet of food-grade, safety-certified warehouse capacity. Prism operates eight facilities throughout Northern California and convenient to port, rail and highways serving the entire major metropolitan region and international gateway.

The company's facilities are in Hayward, Sacramento, Stockton, Modesto and Livermore.

Prism did not identify the seller or the financial terms of the deal.
